From Local to National

Join us for an afternoon of dynamic speakers giving us their perspective on water issues from a national, state and local view point.

Tim Palmer, an award winning photographer and author of 19 books will reflect on a lifetime spent working on conservation through a slide show based on his book: "Rivers of America."

Val L Little is the director of the Water Conservation Alliance of Southern Arizona and relate her experiences of water management issues in the Desert Southwest.

Sara Smith is an Environmental Planner for the Metropolitan Council and will talk about water use and conservation in the Twin Cities metropolitan area.

Jim Doering lives and works in Redwood Falls where he has been part of the ongoing effort to improve water quality in local rivers.
